FOREWORD

Nations at war find that their people turn more and more to spiritual and cultural resources as an antidote for the pain of war, and in large part to reassure themselves that civilization is worth the cost. With this in mind, the Kansas City Art Institute feels a sense of satisfaction in announcing that this year's Midwestern Artists' Exhibition is the largest and evoked more than nine hundred entries.

The Art Institute wishes to express its deep gratitude to Mr. Thomas J. Watson, Mr. W. T. Kemper, Jr., Mrs. D. M. Lighton, Major T. J. Strickler, Mr. Albert Hoffman, Mr. Louis P. Rothschild, the Cook Paint and Varnish Company, Mr. R. P. Lyons, Mr. Lawrence Barrett, and Friends of Art. These generous citizens and patrons of art have contributed the prizes which this year total more than twice as much as in any previous year.

The Art Institute wishes also to recognize the gracious cooperation of the Nelson-Atkins Museum, through its Director, Mr. Paul Gardner, in displaying the Midwestern in its excellent galleries.

Mr. James Plaut, Director of the Boston Institute of Modern Art, served as the one-man jury for this exhibition, and deserves a heartfelt vote of thanks.

Teachers and students find it practically indispensable, a "tool for the school" . . . Amateurs and professionals wax enthusiastic . . . It is always in demand where art-minded people gather.

AMERICAN ARTIST

This is a magazine for active doers—those who paint, draw, etch, make lithographs and the like. It is written by professional artists—the leaders in many branches of fine and commercial art. Visit them in their studios and in the field with us and get an intimate insight into their lives. Follow their comment on composition, color and other phases of their creative processes.

The Artists' Choice . . .

MAGAZINE of ART

"In the literature of art, the most stable and sound guiding post is the 'Magazine of Art'—a handsomely illustrated magazine which is edited by keen and serious minds—men of distinction who are not weaklings nor political journalists."—Peppino Mangravite.

Artists read the Magazine of Art because it gives them good reading, much information, the best reproductions in the field.

Professional artists are now entitled to a special rate on annual subscription (this, naturally, does not include the valuable membership privileges of The American Federation of Arts).

Artists! Write today for information, saying why you are eligible for the special professional artists' rate.
